I CRIED BECAUSE I HAD NO SHOES
UNTIL I SAW A MAN WHO HAD NO FEET

This was on the wall behind the desk of the late Probate Judge J.O. English when we first moved to Elba all those many years ago. It has never been more appropriate to Elba citizens than right now. While we are feeling low and dealing with the multitude aftermath of the March 8 flood waters, people in Jefferson County, Ala. (and in parts of Georgia) are attending multiple funerals for the victims of the April 8th tornadoes which cut a path across North Alabama. An emergency management official who has been in Elba since the flood visited the scene last Thursday. He came back Friday morning to move their equipment to Jefferson County and said the tornado scene was the worst he had ever seen.

The local Assembly of God church is sending a van full of supplies to the tornado victims, along with a sizeable monetary donation. It is their expression of love for their fellow human beings. This gift should be especially appreciated, as many of the members of that church had (have) personal problems which started on Sunday morning, March 8th.

Last week when the tornadoes were making their mark, the warnings were issued in this area also. Things got awful dark, the street lights came on, etc. but we were spared additional damage and deaths. During the tornadoes at prayer in schools, the standing joke is, "As long as you're tests, students will pass." Well, Elba High School proved open. The report is that as students fled into the hallway for cover after the first alert, one student started reciting the Lord's Prayer. The action was picked up by others and soon it seemed the entire school body was praying in unison. By the time of the second alert in town, the students didn't wait for someone else to start a prayer, they all just started. Reportedly, it was a very moving situation for the students involved and for sure it was inspiring to those of us who have heard about it later.

It sounds innovative and we hope it is successful. The Big/Little "on the hill" is planning a gigantic truckload sale of frozen foods this Friday. They hope this will help Elba people restock their freezers following the flood. Of course it will be to fight to victims and will be a great success. We can get a grocery list blank with all the items and prices listed if you, or a group, wants to plan your purchases. Just go to either of the Elba Big/Little stores this week and ask for the shopping list, or just read their ad in The Elba Clipper this week.

There continue to be immature minds in adult bodies. That has probably been a fact of life from the beginning of humanity on earth. Last week during an Easter egg hunt at Daytona Beach, Fla., some of the above described adult bodies in a group of 5,000 people trampled on little children in their misguided effort to be first at a pile of artificial, candy-filled eggs. It would be real nice if those kids could be turned loose (or maybe tied down) in front of a herd of wild elephants on a rampage.

We don't have problems. Put yourself in the shoes of the Ohio woman who got a bill from the IRS last week demanding $270 billion in back taxes ... in three installments. A quick call to the IRS reportedly got the following response ... yep, you owe it! At least the woman had fired a tax attorney because neither she nor her accountant could get anyone at IRS to discuss the matter except to tell her "pay it."

The debate over reform of the Social Security system is heating up and moving toward changes. Different experts advocate privatization of the system, increased taxes, raising the retirement age, cutting SS benefits for that rich folks, changing the cost-of-living increases, etc. It is pretty obvious that changes of some sort are necessary, and soon. It is a bit scary as we find ourselves agreeing with that liberal U.S. senator from New York, Daniel Patrick Moynihan, but it has happened. He advocates a plan which will encompass the free market investing but at the same time preserve the basic structure of the Social Security system. Moynihan's plan would allow some private investments (up to 2 percent of income), increase retirement age gradually, modify cost-of-living adjustments and even increase payroll taxes ... beginning in 2025. The retirement age would reach 70 for those kids not born yet (in the year 2073). His proposal needs to be seriously considered by our lawmakers and their number-crunching assistants because it just might work.

Harrelson's students share reasons for helping

Editor's note: Students of Mike Harrelson, FFA advisor at Eufaula High School, came to Elba recently to help clean up after the flood of March 8. Harrelson is a former resident of Elba and graduate of Elba High School. Some members of the group shared their thoughts about the experience, and Harrelson for warded them to us.

Jennifer Sutton - "The reason I went to Elba was to help the people begin cleaning up what they had left, which was very little. The Eufaula FFA worked together on collecting donations from the residents of Eufaula.

"We collected a good bit of everything, including clothes, food, cleaning supplies and other goods. When we got down there we rode around giving out cleaning supplies to residents and businesses."

"It made me feel good to do this thing, for the people of Elba floods and it was really good to see smiles on their faces. It made everyone happy to be able to help them."

Raven Tew, Secretary - "When I heard on the news about the Elba flood, my heart felt as though it would burst, because I knew it has got to be hard to lose everything when I left Elba that Friday night. I felt as if I had really accomplished something for that day - not just learning how to clean up really good, but to learn how to be there for somebody in need."

"Maybe one day, if we are in need, someone will enjoy helping us as we enjoyed helping Elba people."

"So we decided to ask the citizens of Eufaula for donations such as food, clothes, cleaning supplies and water."

"Instead of sending one person there with everything, we decided to help. We went around town handing out cleaning supplies and designating people to help with cleaning. Then we cooked 200 hamburgers and gave them out."

"Before we left we took all the Adviser - "After the flood, our chapter advisor, Mr. Mike Harrelson, showed us a tape of Elba and all the things that were destroyed. He explained to us how devastating the flood of '90 was, and we asked if there was anything we could do to help."

"So we decided to ask the citizens of Eufaula for donations such as food, clothes, cleaning supplies and water."

"Before we left we took all the clothes and canned goods to Rev. W.L. Peterson of the Greater Mt. Zion Baptist Church to distribute to whomever needed them throughout the community."

Jesus spent most days of His life doing God's will without pageantry

By Mart Gray
Coordinator, Alabama Cooperative Baptist Fellowship

Easter's a great day all the way around. The moist, crisp air of a sunrise Service splashes our face like that first cold tap water from the morning sink. We are invigorated and inspired by the heights of rising sun, the sky pink and blue. Later it's off to church for a special day of worship...a day like no other during the year. New clothes, new hats, and those freshly polished white shoes all say this is indeed a different day.

Resurrection is a powerful theme...the organ will be a little louder...the choir will sing with a bit more gusto...the preacher will articulate more boldly and with more certainty...and the warm faces of family home for the day will make us all feel good about being members of the family of God.

Easter's a great day to be a child of God. It's a great day to celebrate our Christianity, our faith. It's a great day to remind us of all that Christ meant when He said, "I am come that you might have Life and have it more abundantly." We hear those words and nod in assured agreement. But, like Christmas, Easter only comes once a year. Like our birthday, we only bring out the cake and candles one day out of 365.

So where does that leave us the rest of the year? What gets us out of bed each morning and what motivates us to do a daily basis? How do we cope with the vast "meaning" of life? How do we live Monday through Saturday that says what we do on Sunday makes a difference?

Jesus spent most of his ministry not atop a white donkey or people waved palm fronds in the air. He spent most of His ministry senza the white gown of resurrected splendor. His time in the temple was very brief compared to the expansive "teaching" of His Father.

If you took a random sample of the New Testament accounts of the activities of our Lord, more often than not, it would portray Him wearing dirty sandals around tired day-to-day faithfulness...may not always be a party, but will never fail to bring its own reward.

Easter's a great day to be a child of God. It's a great day to celebrate our Christianity, our faith. It's a great day to remind us of all that

You Need to Know: Briton Hammon was the first black prose writer of record with "A Narrative of Briton Hammon, a Slave in 1760." The first part was "Luck Two with 'Bye Flyby' in 1764. One of the most prolific poets of the 18th century was Jupiter Hammon, a slave. Phillips Wheatley published her first poem in 1770. The birth of a real Negro literary tradition dates from 1853 when Alma Wells Brown wrote "Clotel," the story of the hardships of a Mulatto family. W.E.B. DuBois and James Weldon Johnson commanded a national audience when DuBois wrote "Souls of Black Folks" in 1903, and Johnson produced his "Autobiography of an ex-coloured Man," 1912. Countee Cullen carried poetry to new heights. Langston Hughes, considered after him, became known as the most durable of the Negro Renaissance. (America's Black History Calendar)

Mayor explains building priorities

Mayor James Grimes explained the priority schedule city officials have set on getting municipal buildings back in operation following the March 8 flood. The Senior Citizens building will be ready for use in less than a month, as will the police department building if the radio equipment is installed. The two facilities have first priority, explained Grimes.

The library is cleaned out and the custom built cabinets are under construction and then it will be ready for new books. The fire department is back in its building, but some renovations are still to be made.

City Hall will not be occupied for at least three months. Officials are going ahead with some major renovations they were already committed to do... bringing the facility up to ADA (handicapped accessible) and other modifications.

Meanwhile the senior citizens are meeting at the Elba Assembly of God; the police department is headquartered at the airport and city hall is in the old Guard/Reserve Center on Claxton Avenue.

Flood insurance adjusters have submitted their estimate of damages on several of the facilities and the council approved Grimes' recommendation and accepted the set-tements.

said that some people out in the county had expressed a desire to be under the recent much publicized buy-out.

Director of Coffee County's Emergency Management Agency Charles Webb briefed commissioners on the federally funded program as it applies to the county.

Webb told commissioners that the buy-out is part of a Hazard Mitigation Grant Program and has been applied for.

"The goal of the program is to support cost effective measures implemented during the recovery from a disaster that will reduce the risk of damage and suffering from future disasters," he said.

The director told members of the commission that the first step is to submit a notice of intent in participating.

"This does not obligate the county to anything," Webb said. "It just says we're interested and may wish to participate."

Should the county decide there are areas in some areas that need to be moved, both the state and county will then file an application.

Webb explained that funding for that comes from the federal and local government agencies.

The reward is for the arrest and conviction of person or persons who took the animal.

Whitworth added that the person or persons who took the dog will volunteer to return the animal, or send word where he can be picked up, there will be no questions asked.

The council also approved a settlement with Kellie Karch concerning his lease/purchase of the old high school gym. English had painted the building under the Wallace-Cater Act for new or expanding industry. There has been no business activity in the facility for several years.

The council agreed to pay English $20,000 rather than spend the time and money in court to break the agreement.

The council agreed to pay English $20,000 rather than spend the time and money in court to break the agreement. Mayor James Grimes explained to council members that Worth Tent wants the facility to expand its growing manufacturing business and add 15 to 25 employees to the work force.

Grimes said Worth Tent wants to expand the facility to allow more room for their weaving operation in the old middle school building. He said Elba doesn't want to loose Worth Tent and needs to work with the company in any way possible to help with the planned expansion.

The mayor indicated that there is a probability the Industrial Board will help with the payment of the $2.8 million sewer improvement project ready to go and federal officials will help with bids on a new firm end loader to replace one which is almost worn out.

Monthly bills totaling $36,156.07 were approved for payment. This included $18,779.12 in regular bills and $17,376.95 in flood-related expenses.

roadsides, but the city crews are working as fast as they can to get this cleared up.

The two biggest problems for the street department are the bridges on Caroline Street and Tiger Drive, Morrow said. Both are closed due to flood damage. He said that engineers took a look at the bridge and there is no hidden damage; the bridges (or the approaches) can be repaired rather quickly and without major work on the bridges themselves.

The council approved going ahead with the previously contracted resurfacing of Reddock Hill Road.

This had been held up following the March 8 flooding. Also the council approved bids on a new firm end loader to replace one which is almost worn out.
